Joyce was born in Windsor, IL. The house later burned down. Although her first name is Valeta, she made the choice to go by her middle name when she was a young adult. She said that children teased about the name Valeta—calling her “Velveeta cheese” and other similar names. Her family nickname was “Biz,” given her because she was seen as always busy. She met Glenn Keen while attending night school. After dating for four years, they married. Joyce got her 2-year diploma from Eastern IL State Teachers’ College at Charleston, IL. The college was later called Eastern IL U. That was what was required for teaching at that time. She started teaching in a rural school near Sullivan. She taught in rural schools in that area for five years. Then she went back and got a Bachelor’s Degree from Northern IL University and her Master’s of Education from Purdue U., Lafayette, IN. Joyce taught full-time from 1948 until she retired. She taught 34 years in all, elementary all grades. She remained a wife, homemaker, and class taker in spite of being a full-time teacher. She died in Porter Memorial Hospital in Valparaiso, IN, in 2005. She had had several strokes.

The cause of death was listed as respiratory failure, aspiration pneumonia. It was a hiatal hernia pressing on her lungs. She was living in the nursing home at the time of death.

d. May 1, 1982 In Chesterton, IN Buried in Keen's Chapel Cemetery, Iola, IL He lost his mother when he was 7 years old. His grandmother came to the farmhouse and kept house for three years. Glenn felt that she favored him over the other children and he missed her greatly when she returned to her own home. His older brothers and sisters had already left home. In the fall Glenn was moved into the Marshall house in Iola, IL, and his grandmother stayed with them at night. Only a month later, his grandmother died. He was sent to live with relatives. Both relatives died within 48 hours of each other (flu). He was sent to Sullivan, IL to live with a sister (Mayme). He graduated from elementary school in Sullivan. He returned to the farm but hated it and went to live with an aunt (Rachel.) He stayed two years. Aunt Rachel was always repeating her stories, and Glenn got tired of hearing them, so he would doodle and draw when she would tell them, and he was still able to comment on them at the appropriate intervals. In March 1927, he got a certificate to teach on his 18th birthday. He began to teach at Fender School in Iola, IL grades K-8. He attended drawing classes. He met his wife Joyce while attending a night school and married in Decatur, IL., on June 1, 1940. On Dec. 8, 1941, he entered the Navy. He trained to be a classification Specialist as a Navy Petty Officer. He was assigned to Great Lakes Naval Training Station. He was discharged in December, 1945. He held various government jobs in Evanston, IL, and moved to Rockford, IL. in 1947 or 1948. Glenn began teaching art in the Rockford schools and in 1952 had a total gastrectomy. In 1969, he began to teach art at Sterling College while living in Lyons, KS. He taught art in Arkansas City and in Chesterton, IN. He retired from teaching while teaching the second grade in Michigan City, IN. After retirement, he taught art in a Catholic school in IN.
